The African Grey Parrot is the Einstein of the bird world. How do we know? First there was Alex, a parrot who worked with an American scientist. They say that when he died at the age of 30, he was as intelligent as a five-year-old child. Now there is N’kisi. He also lives in America. He not only repeats words, he understands them. He makes original sentences and asks questions. You can have a real conversation with him. They say he has a sense of humour.

The girls are nothing special, but the boys are gorgeous. They are dressed up in beautiful colourful feathers. No wonder they are called birds-of-paradise. Different species (about forty of them) have different colours. They love to show off. Some of them are great dancers, too. When they want to attract a girl they hit the dance floor. Birds-of-paradise live in the tropical forests of the large island of New Guinea. A bird-of-paradise is on the flag of Papua New Guinea.

The strong and independent Bald Eagles don’t look romantic. They have powerful beaks, sharp eyes, dangerous claws and huge wings but they have faithful hearts. They stay with the same mate until one of them dies. These beautiful big birds with a white head feed mostly on fish and live near the ocean or big lakes. They make big nests in tall trees. The Bald Eagle is the national bird of the United States of America.
